ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

“India lives in its villages” - Mahatma Gandhi.

Literally and from the social, economic and political perspectives the statement is valid even today. Around 65% of the State's population is living in rural areas. People in rural areas should have the same quality of life as is enjoyed by people living in sub urban and urban areas. Further there are cascading effects of poverty, unemployment, poor and inadequate infrastructure in rural areas on urban centers causing slums and consequential social and economic tensions manifesting in economic deprivation and urban poverty. Hence Rural Development which is concerned with economic growth and social justice, improvement in the living standard of the rural people by providing adequate and quality social services and minimum basic needs becomes essential.

IT has become the buzzword in India these days. Moreover, how many people in this country can afford to have a personal computer or PC? In such a scenario, it may be rather difficult task to answer a question like – what can be the role of IT in villages or in rural development the critics forget that villagers also have their own information needs. They need to know about their village, their districts, natural resources around them, about seasons and monsoons, about market rates of different commodities and about government schemes. They also need to know how much money is being allocated for rural development in their area and how much is being spent. And all these concerns are related intensely to their lives and livelihood. A connected PC is an effective tool to do all this and much more. The main objective of this conference is to focus on technology, management and environment to evolve appropriate strategies that can be implemented for the rural development and the management of the resources.

VISION

The vision of the conference is to create the awareness among the people residing in the rural areas through appropriate technology with a view to develop and manage the resources in their vicinity
